This tool supports all parts of MSI including sections, components, scripts, dependencies, installers, etc. There's also another tool (TSMSy) here which does the opposite (MSI to EXE) These tools are not free. Wednesday, September 5, 2008 Sorry for the lack of updates, my life has been crazy! It's been hectic with the work, the college and my schedule of having to do the classes. There's only a few days left for the school semester and I think I'm going to pass my finals... and then I'm going to work on my thesis. And so, I take my leave of the blog. It has been fun, I must say, and as always, I've enjoyed reading all your comments and messages. I'd really like to thank each and every one of you for your comments, criticisms and suggestions. I would like to assure you that I'll definitely read and watch the reviews of all the books that I've read and watched and try to improve on my works. Tuesday, August 5, 2008 Today I was looking at my inbox and checking the unread messages on Yahoo! mail, when I spotted a message from my good friend Gem. She's recently finished reading the novel 'Beloved' by Toni Morrison and she wanted to know if I've watched the movie adaptation. To my surprise, I hadn't. To be honest, I haven't been paying much attention to movies since a few years ago. It's not that I'm averse to watch any movie, per say; it's just that I was rather busy with my studies and the most important thing that I have right now is writing papers. But, it's a funny story when you think about it. I've been writing a review on 'Beloved' for a while, and the great thing about it is that it's a very good novel. I just felt that it was good enough to be a novel, and 1d6a3396d6

Q: Click on picture on canvas - keyboard keys There is any way how to make click on picture on canvas. I mean i need click on picture on canvas when i use some keyboard keys. A: There are two ways that you could achieve this. 1. Bind a listener to the mousemove event. 2. Bind a listener to the focusin event. If you are looking to bind your listener to the canvas element (and not the image element in the canvas), you would do the following. function addClickListener(canvas, handler){ canvas.addEventListener("mousemove", function(ev){ handler(ev); }, false); } addClickListener(canvas,"clickHandler"); The canvas element has a focusin event. // Add listeners to click on #container. document.getElementById("container").addEventListener("click", function() { // This will run when you click anywhere on #container alert("

Write a review User Review Related Articles Even though there is a ton of software that can create self-extracting files, most of them are able to create EXE files only. They may create ZIP files which do contain some sort of self-extracting content, but the file type is technically a ZIP file. The self-extracting ZIP is a special file type that usually contains several compressed files. The files can either be from the same source or of multiple sources. Self-extracting ZIP files are often used for software. They contain all files that a software needs to run, and the self-extracting format allows the file to be extracted from the ZIP archive in a single step. So in this article, we will share three interesting examples of the self-extracting ZIP format. Murderer: Sierra.exe is a program that contains malware and spyware to take control of your computer. The US government has resumed its crackdown on pirate sites, seizing an additional 30 domains in a joint operation with the UK, with the help of Google. The operation was codenamed Operation In Our Sites (OIOS), an attempt to clamp down on rogue sites offering fake goods online. The BBC reports that the actions were coordinated by the FBI and the Immigration and Customs Enforcement department. They've taken the domains of websites offering counterfeit goods, which are manufactured but never actually shipped. The FBI would not comment on how many sites were seized or which, if any, had been involved in running a 'reputation laundering' scheme to mask their criminal intentions. A spokesperson said it was an ongoing operation, adding "any co-operation that can be provided for law enforcement is sought and encouraged." The operation was a collaboration with the UK Intellectual Property Office (IPO), which asked Google to help it identify sites it believed were likely to be engaged in counterfeiting. Google has since conducted a review of the sites, and in some cases revoked their domains. "The growing prevalence of counterfeiting has come to our attention, and we have seen strong evidence that these domains are being used
