Category:Windows Server 2008 appreciate your article. I'm actually doing a post on this subject, but you have given me some much-needed info. I would love to find out more! I live in Moscow, Russia and I love to travel. One of my goals is to visit many cities in Europe, as I've only been there once (to Paris for summer), but in the past two years alone, I've been to Hungary, Croatia and Romania, as well as to Egypt, Tunisia, Turkey, Poland and Russia. We are planning to visit more European countries in 2017. Though Eastern Europe seems more developed than Western Europe, from what you wrote, it seems Eastern Europe is a much better place to visit, especially if you are into design. I know a lot of people from Moscow and I'm sure I can find really good design shops there. What are some of them? Are you from Moscow? Where do you live? I will visit my brother in Moscow by end of January. Is it possible to visit "design" shops there? What are those shops for?Q: WCF services - how do you get the type information passed in the methods? I make a sinterior of the passed to the methods. In a recent project, I took over a solution and the solution had a WCF Service project that I was inheriting from, the inheritances were only set to the original version 1.1 WCF service. The types were not passed to the methods. Instead, some type is passed into the method that has an attribute of type System. Type, I get the following error: "System. Type cannot be added as a parameter". How is the service still working if there is no
